

Summary

The clients think that the current design is too corporate and makes too much heavy use of one colour. However, the structure of the website is easy to navigate. Slight changes to the menu are required for better flow, which includes grouping the volunteer and donation items together and making the contact page easier to find.

The top priorities are:

- Induce a warmer, more playful, personalized design style.
- Ensure there is consistency between all pages. Text, banners, and background colours must be cohesive. Other colours for backgrounds can be used to denote distinct sections.

Areas to Improve

The client said that the design still feels corporate, like on the current “Contact” page. This is the same critique made by a peer of the prototype during the scramble activity of the last check-in. Since more than one test user has made the same comment, the team will have to take specific note of this and change the design accordingly. The client specifically stated that they want a design that is more playful, warm, and personal, to better reflect their organization.

The design made heavy use of the colour blue. Using lighter tones with a warmer colour palette will be explored.

Liked

- Scrolling widget that lets you immediately scroll back to the top
- Liked the design of the “Resources” page, which has a blue background, white content box with black border
- The mountain background on the home page

Elements that need to be changed/added:

- Include links to each sponsor’s website
- Make sponsor logos have transparent backgrounds
- Add “Contact” bucket in menu and include info/form in footer
- Change “Volunteer” bucket to “Get Involved” with sub-items “Volunteer” and “Donate”
- Have the accordion span the entire page so when it is expanded the spacing doesn’t become awkward or clunky
- Put an overlay over the “Donate” section in the footer
